SEEKING VIOLATORS OF BIRD LAW

Inspector Hennessy of First Federal District Making Headquarters Here for a Few Days.

F. W. Hennessy of Providence United States district inspector, came here Monday for the purpose of investigating several complaints which have been made relative to the violation of the game and bird laws. Inspector Hennessy is assigned under the federal migratory bird law to the first district, which comprises the states of New England. He is mak-ing his headquarters at the Wauregan House for a few days.

He has been in conference with a number of sportsmen of this vicinity relative to the manner in which the federal law is being observed and would be glad to receive any reports of violations for the purpose of bring-ing about the prosecution of the law-conditions and violations and states that there are often cases which should receive attention although the game wardens often think they are not important enough to report. Vio-lations which have occurred within the past three years will be taken notice of, and Inspector Hennessy states that he now has eighteen cases pend-ing before different courts.

From what he has learned from local residents he is convinced that there are violations in this part of the state which should be checked and he is determined to accomplish it if possible.

Sunday Trips For Steamers,

Freighters of the Central Vermont railway were obliged to make trips Saturday night from New London contrary to the usual custom because of the heavy freight business. Freighter New London went down to New York and the New York made the trip to New London, both boats carrying heavy cargoes. No one spec-ial commodity is responsible for the heavy freight business, although large quantities of sugar are being handled.

Su-perintendent Duff has also tried to drive it away, but it returns constantly whatever he does to scare it off. He has given it frequent chances to go in through the gate, but so far it has proved too wise, though one day it lingered for a long time right on the verge of stepping into the enclosure.

A. L. Clarke, '05, gave a serious talk on the danger of intercropping in student activities to the detriment of the ber of names, largely those of the boys and girls in the neighborhood, who asked that the board arrange some way by which the surface of the small ficient use of the new gym. Mr. Man-chester spoke at length on the value of athletics and the benefits that the skating pond could be flooded at night so as to provide a new surface of ice each day. The board could not see how this could be done without such expense as to make the plan prohibitive just at present.

An entertainment by the students was the next event. The Dramatic club staged a one act farce, Whiskers, which was immensely appreciated, and then followed several selections by the Glee and Mandolin clubs. The fraternity reunions lasted into the wee small hours of the morning.

The day itself can be said to mark an epoch in the history of the college. Love for the college was reawakened and all avowed their firm intentions of being present next year. A vote of appreciation for the cordiality shown by the student body was Part Which This Slave Took in Behalf of American Liberty Discussed Before Union Lyceum,

The Union Lyceum held an inter esting meeting in Grace Memorial Baptist church at 4 p. m. Sunday, Rev. R. B. Harris, paster. The subject for discussion was the part Crispus Attucks took in the early days of the Revolutionary war.
There was a large gathering. Wiliam T. Fields opened the discussion with an earnest address, after which there were remarks by Revs. Harri and Biddle and Deacon Payne. The following paper on Attucks was read by Miss Frances Fields.

Among those whose blood was first

Among those whose blood was first shed for the cause of American liberty was the runaway slave, Crispus Attucks, Having escaped from his master, William Brown, of Framingham, Mass, at the age of 27, being then six feet two inches high, with "short curled hair," he made his way to Boston. His master, in 1750, offered a reward of ten pounds for him fered a reward of ten pounds for him, but Crispus was not found. When next heard from he turns up in the streets of Boston.

Attucks had no doubt been listening the flery eloquence of the patriots of those burning times. The words of the eloquent Itis had kindled his soul the eloquent Itis had kindled his soul and though a runaway slave, his patriotism was so deep that he it was who sacrificed his life first on the altar of American liberty.

General Gage, the English commander, had taken possession of Boston. Under the British flag gaily dressed soldiers marched the streets make the necessary arrangements and appoint a date for the opening. It was also decided to change the dressed soldiers marched the streets of Boston as through a conquered city; their every act was an insult to the inhabitants. Finally, on March 5, 1770, with Crispus Attucks at the head of a large crowd of citizens, a fight ensued on the street.

The troops were ordered to fire on the "mob," and Attucks fell, the first one, with three others, Caldwell, Gray and Maverick. The town bell was rung, the alarm given and citizens from the country ran into Boston, The members of the Norwich Cham-ber of Commerce have received letters where the greatest excitement pre-
